

Japan- Sanaenomics: the blueprint for Japan's economic dominance

- We recently published a book titled "Sanaenomics: The Blueprint for Japan's Economic Dominance," which explains the economic policies of the Takaichi administration, which took office in October of last year. Sanaenomics, which refers to the economic policies of the Takaichi administration, is often mistakenly thought to be the same as Abenomics of the Shinzo Abe administration, which centred on the BoJ's large-scale monetary easing, and this often leads to confusion in interpretation in financial markets. In this book, Takuji Aida, an advisor to the Takaichi administration as an expert member of the Japan Growth Strategy Council, provides a clear explanation of the ideas and policies of Sanaenomics. The following is an excerpt from the book's preface.

Takuji Aida

Chief Economist Japan
+81 3 4580 5360
takuji.aida@ca-cib.com

Ken Matsumoto

Market Strategist Japan
+81 3 4580 5337
ken.matsumoto@ca-cib.com

Sanaenomics: the blueprint for Japan's economic dominance

The world is misreading the Takaichi administration

When the Takaichi administration took power, global financial markets and international media shifted almost unanimously into alarm mode. Government bonds were sold off, the yen plunged, and "bond vigilantes" descended on the Japanese government bond market. "Sanaenomics is reckless fiscal expansion." "Populist handouts." "A rehash of Abenomics." "Economically unsustainable." These warnings erupted in unison.

Yet every one of these reactions rests on the same framework: "Japan is the world's most indebted nation; proactive fiscal policy will send interest rates soaring, the yen crashing, and precipitate a fiscal crisis." This is the formulaic narrative that has been repeated for thirty years.

But what if this framework itself is fundamentally wrong?

In reality, a vast gap exists between the policies of the Takaichi administration and the way overseas media and markets perceive them. Even the Japanese domestic media has struggled to convey the essence of Sanaenomics accurately. The misunderstanding abroad is all the more severe.

Why publish an English edition of this book?

The Japanese edition of this book became an immediate Amazon bestseller, reaching number one in three categories and going through multiple printings. It struck a chord because the data and analytical framework it presents were an eye-opener for many Japanese readers themselves—the book overturns, from the foundations, the conventional wisdom about the Japanese economy that had held sway for thirty years.

As an economist, I have been analyzing Japan's economy from the front lines for virtually the entire span of the "lost thirty years." I currently serve as a private-sector member of the Takaichi administration's Council on Japan's Growth Strategy, and am involved in policy formulation.

The reason for publishing an English edition is clear: to provide, from inside the policy-making process, the analytical tools and data needed to correct the serious misunderstandings about Sanaenomics that pervade overseas media, investors, and economists. This book is not a Japan commentary by an outside observer. Its original analytical framework—found in no overseas report—will reveal why conventional analyses of the Japanese economy keep missing the mark.

Three prevailing misconceptions

Click below to experience our new interactive data website:

RED MOUNT Analytics
BY CRÉDIT AGRICOLE CIB

Misconceptions about Sanaenomics can be distilled into three.

The first misconception: “Sanaenomics is a rehash of Abenomics (Abenomics 2.0).”

“They are trying to repeat Abenomics from the deflation era under inflation.” This is a fundamental error.

The protagonist of Abenomics was monetary policy—the massive easing of the “Kuroda bazooka.” The Bank of Japan flooded the market with money, aiming for yen depreciation and asset-price inflation. Fiscal policy was effectively neutral or contractionary: the consumption tax was raised twice, and the primary fiscal balance surplus target was firmly maintained. The growth strategy centered on neoliberal deregulation premised on the idea that “government should get out of the way.”

Sanaenomics is structurally and fundamentally different. The protagonist is fiscal policy—public-private growth investment in 17 strategic fields including energy, semiconductors, AI and quantum technology, economic security, disaster-prevention infrastructure, space, the content industry, and human capital. These investments are embedded not in supplementary budgets but in the main budget, making them continuous and strategic. On the monetary-policy front, whereas Abenomics pursued easing, Sanaenomics accepts gradual rate increases by the Bank of Japan. Not easing but rate hikes—the approach is diametrically opposite. Equating the two is akin to calling the New Deal and Reaganomics “the same because both involve big government.”

The second misconception: “Japan’s fiscal position is critical, and proactive fiscal policy is unsustainable.”

The argument that Japan is “the world’s most indebted nation” on the basis of gross government debt at 217 percent of GDP has become boilerplate in overseas media and international institutions. But this is like assessing a company’s financial health by looking only at total liabilities.

The Japanese government holds financial assets amounting to 136 percent of GDP. On a net-debt basis—assets subtracted—the ratio is approximately 81 percent, which is smaller than the roughly 106 percent of the United States.

Even more important is that interest rates are determined not by government debt alone but by the debt structure of the entire economy, including the corporate sector. As this book explains in detail, the net debt of Japanese corporations is zero—a situation unique among advanced economies. When government and corporate debt are combined, the economy-wide debt structure is roughly 72 percent of GDP, compared with approximately 313 percent for the United States and 118 percent for the eurozone—overwhelmingly smaller. Japan does not have “too much debt”; if anything, it has “too little.” According to OECD estimates, even if the BOJ raises rates and the short-term rate reaches 2 percent, Japan’s net government interest payments would remain at roughly 1 percent of GDP. Given that the United States and the Eurozone carry net interest burdens of 3 to 4 percent of GDP, the thesis of a “JGB crash” can be seen for what it is: flimsy.

The third misconception: “Sanaenomics is populist handout policy.”

Overseas voices persistently cite the consumption tax cut and cash transfers as evidence of “short-term populist politics.” But household support measures such as a consumption tax cut are a bridge—a temporary measure to sustain households until the fruits of growth investment reach them. They are not the core of the policy.

The core is public-private growth investment in 17 strategic fields—in other words, expanding supply capacity. In the short term, investment boosts the economy as demand; over the medium to long term, it transforms into supply capacity, stabilizes inflation, and raises potential growth. Rather than the “unhappy path” of forcing the BOJ into aggressive rate hikes that damage the economy to suppress inflation, Sanaenomics follows the “happy path” of expanding supply capacity through investment to stabilize inflation. This is its essence.

Behind this shift lies a change in the global tide. Over the past two decades, while advanced nations took a neoliberal, hands-off approach, China steadily expanded public-private investment. In response—as exemplified by the U.S. CHIPS Act and IRA and by various European industrial policies—advanced nations have entered an era of intense competition in growth investment. Japan, whose primary fiscal balance moved into surplus in the FY 2026 budget, is the only G7 nation falling behind in this investment race. Sanaenomics is a national strategy to close that gap.

The true cause of the “Lost Thirty Years”—the original analytical framework this book provides

Why do such deep misconceptions arise? Because the analytical framework used to assess the Japanese economy is itself wrong.

Overseas commentators try to explain Japan’s stagnation through population decline, aging, and sluggish productivity. But if population decline were the primary cause, why did nominal GDP expand by more than 100 trillion yen—from the 500-trillion to the upper-600-trillion-yen range—after the pandemic, when population decline accelerated and aging advanced further? Demographics cannot explain this fact.

The core of the analytical framework this book presents is two indicators: the corporate savings rate and net funding demand.

The financial crisis of 1997–98 caused a fundamental change in Japanese corporate behavior. Before the crisis, Japanese firms—like those in every other advanced economy—borrowed from banks and invested in capital expenditure; they were net “borrowers.” But traumatized by the crisis, companies threw themselves into debt repayment and cost-cutting. They slashed wages, minimized capex, and used profits to pay down debt. The result: Japan’s corporate sector transformed from net “borrower” to net “saver.” Japan is the only advanced economy in which corporate net debt has fallen to zero (U.S. corporations carry net debt of roughly 207 percent of GDP; eurozone corporations, roughly 61 percent).

When the corporate sector cuts domestic spending and exerts a contractionary force on the economy, it falls to the government to offset that force and expand the economy. Unless net funding demand—the sum of the corporate savings rate and the fiscal balance—is maintained at around negative 5 percent of GDP, meaning the public and private sectors together are spending, nominal GDP will not expand sustainably. Yet in Japan, this indicator has hovered near zero for thirty years.

At first glance, Japan’s fiscal deficit looks large. But compared with the abnormal savings surplus of the corporate sector, government spending was clearly insufficient. There was a fiscal deficit, yet the reality was austerity. This is the root cause of near-zero nominal GDP growth—the “pie” of business not expanding for thirty years.

When the pie does not grow, firms can only compete by restructuring and cutting costs. Wages are squeezed as a cost item; capex is deferred. The capex-to-real GDP ratio was stuck below a ceiling of 17–18 percent for three decades. This deflationary equilibrium—this vicious cycle of contraction—is the true identity of the “lost thirty years.” Its cause was not demographics but a policy failure: excessive austerity thinking.

This analytical framework provides a perspective that overseas economists have been missing. Judging whether fiscal policy is “profligate” or “austere” solely by the absolute size of the deficit is to see only one side of the economy. Only by looking at the corporate and government sectors together one can determine whether an economy is truly expansionary or contractionary. Using this framework, the book dissects the Japanese economy over the past thirty years and demonstrates, with data, why conventional analysis keeps getting it wrong.

To investors, media, and economists—why you should be watching Japan now

The pandemic inadvertently became a grand “social experiment” for the Japanese economy. When massive fiscal spending pushed net funding demand to negative 5 percent of GDP, nominal GDP expanded by more than 100 trillion yen—even as the population continued to shrink. Sanaenomics is a strategic attempt to replicate this “accidental success” of the pandemic era.

Its targets are defined by six clear indicators: a “high-pressure economy” with an output gap above 2 percent; net funding demand at negative 5 percent of GDP; a return of the corporate savings rate to negative territory; a decline in the net-debt-to-GDP ratio through growth; nominal GDP growth of around 3 percent; and positive real-wage growth.

What does this mean for investors?

If capex breaks through its thirty-year ceiling of 17–18 percent of GDP, Japanese equities will witness “the end of the eternal range” and “the start of a structural uptrend.” In an economy where nominal GDP expands sustainably, equity market capitalization rises in proportion to the size of the economy—the same mechanism that has driven the long-term rise of the S&P 500 is beginning to play out in Japan.

On the exchange rate, the yen’s current weakness reflects insufficient domestic demand expectations. If Sanaeconomics expands domestic investment and revives domestic demand, a “good appreciation” of the yen will follow, reflecting the recovery of national economic strength. Stock prices and the yen rising together—upending the conventional “strong yen equals weak stocks” wisdom. Note, too, that the roughly 110-yen rate that became entrenched after the bubble burst was, over a forty-year horizon, an overshooting of yen strength; the return to 150 yen is merely a normalization.

Some have reacted with alarm to the rise in thirty-year government bond yields to the 3-percent range, calling it a “fiscal crisis.” But this is a normalization that prices in 3-percent nominal GDP growth, as confirmed by the simultaneous rise in stock prices. Japan’s net-debt-to-GDP ratio has improved dramatically from around 120 percent before the pandemic to roughly 80 percent, and S&P has stated that “there is considerable room before a downgrade.”

In the February 2026 general election, Prime Minister Takaichi’s Liberal Democratic Party won a decisive victory, securing a stable political base that eliminates the need for a national election until 2028. A clear political runway exists for the major fiscal-policy pivot expected in this June’s Basic Policy on Economic and Fiscal Management and Reform.

Japan’s economy has winning prospects

For thirty years, Japan held back investment in order to “not burden future generations with debt,” and in doing so bequeathed them a weak economy instead. Thirty years of cutting costs, saving, and paying down debt—the result was an economy that generates neither income nor growth, handed on to the next generation. Sanaeconomics fundamentally reverses this thinking. It aims to leave behind expanded supply capacity, advanced technology, resilient infrastructure, and high-caliber human capital as “gifts to future generations.” What is truly irresponsible is to fear debt, neglect investment, and leave a feeble economy to those who come after us.

I chose the word “winning prospects” for the title not out of wishful thinking or optimism. It is because, having dissected the mechanism of thirty years of stagnation, I can point to a concrete strategy for overcoming it and the data to back it up. That is why I can state with conviction that Japan has winning prospects.

Once, the world overestimated Japan’s growth potential. For the next thirty years, it underestimated Japan’s latent strength. Now the pendulum is beginning to swing again.

This book offers a new analytical tool for understanding the Japanese economy, replacing the outdated framework that overseas economists and media have relied upon. Only those who grasp the great pivot from a “retreat strategy” to an “offensive investment strategy” will be positioned to profit from the structural transformation now unfolding in Japan.

The “lost thirty years” of the Japanese economy are drawing to a close. And beyond them lie winning prospects.

Note: The content is a personal opinion and does not necessarily reflect the government’s view.

With Red Mount Analytics, we are setting a new standard for market intelligence

France 360° Monitors

Only one topic for now, to be extended. France came to the brink of a crisis in 2024 – see how and why. This section will be expanded in the future as other countries come under the spotlight.

Source: RMA by Crédit Agricole CIB

Red Mount Analytics

Complex markets require the most advanced and powerful tools...

Source: RMA by Crédit Agricole CIB

Our new interactive data website features:

- 25bn data points
- over 4,500 interactive charts
- over 1,000 proprietary models
- over 250 use cases
- over 150 thematic reports
- 9 product classes (eg, EM, FX, Sustainable, Credit)
- 6 categories (eg, flows, fundamentals, RV)
- 90% exclusive content
- AI modelling

Global Markets Research contact details

Jean-François Paren Head of Global Markets Research +33 1 41 89 33 95
	Asia (Hong Kong, Singapore & Tokyo)		Europe (London & Paris)
Macro Strategy	Takuji Aida Chief Economist Japan +81 3 4580 5360	Ken Matsumoto Macro Strategist Japan +81 3 4580 5337	Louis Harreau Head of Developed Markets Macro & Strategy +33 1 41 89 98 95	Valentin Giust Global Macro Strategist +33 1 41 89 30 01
Interest Rates			Guillaume Martin Interest Rates Strategist +33 1 41 89 37 66 Riccardo Lamia Interest Rates Strategist +33 1 41 89 63 83	Jean-François Perrin Senior Inflation Strategist +33 1 41 89 73 49 Matthias Loise Inflation Strategist +33 1 41 89 20 06
Emerging Markets	Xiaojia Zhi Chief China Economist Head of Research, Asia ex-Japan +852 2826 5725 Eddie Cheung CFA Senior Emerging Market Strategist +852 2826 1553	Jeffrey Zhang Emerging Market Strategist +852 2826 5749 Yeon Jin Kim Emerging Market Analyst +852 2826 5756	Sébastien Barbé Head of Emerging Markets Research & Strategy +33 1 41 89 15 97	Olga Yangol  Head of Emerging Market Research & Strategy, Americas +1 212 261 3953
Foreign Exchange	David Forrester Senior FX Strategist +65 6439 9826		Valentin Marinov Head of G10 FX Research & Strategy +44 20 7214 5289	Alexandre Dolci FX Strategist +44 20 7214 5064
Quant Research			Alexandre Borel Data Scientist +33 1 57 87 34 27

 employee(s) of Crédit Agricole Securities (USA), Inc.

Certification

The views expressed in this report accurately reflect the personal views of the undersigned analyst(s). In addition, the undersigned analyst(s) has not and will not receive any compensation for providing a specific recommendation or view in this report.

Takuji Aida, Ken Matsumoto

Important: Please note that in the United States, this fixed income research report is considered to be fixed income commentary and not fixed income research. Notwithstanding this, the Crédit Agricole CIB Research Disclaimer that can be found at the end of this report applies to this report in the United States as if references to research report were to fixed income commentary. Products and services are provided in the United States through Crédit Agricole Securities (USA), Inc.

Foreign exchange disclosure statement to clients of CACIB

https://www.ca-cib.com/sites/default/files/2017-02/2016-05-04-cacib-fx-disclosure-april-2016_0.pdf

Additional recommendation obligations – available from analyst(s) upon request:

- A list of all the recommendation changes on any financial instrument or issuer disseminated within the last 12 months.
- Where Crédit Agricole CIB is a market-maker or liquidity provider in the financial instruments of the issuer.

MiFID II contact details

Andrew Taylor MiFID II Research contact andrew.taylor@ca-cib.com	Please send your questions on MiFID II to: research.mifid2@ca-cib.com
--	---

Disclaimer

© 2026, CRÉDIT AGRICOLE CORPORATE AND INVESTMENT BANK All rights reserved.

This research report or summary has been prepared by Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank or one of its affiliates (collectively "Crédit Agricole CIB") from information believed to be reliable. Such information has not been independently verified and no guarantee, representation or warranty, express or implied, is made as to its accuracy, completeness or correctness.

This report is provided for information purposes only. Nothing in this report should be considered to constitute investment, legal, accounting or taxation advice and you are advised to contact independent advisors in order to evaluate this report. It is not intended, and should not be considered, as an offer, invitation, solicitation or personal recommendation to buy, subscribe for or sell any of the financial instruments described herein, nor is it intended to form the basis for any credit, advice, personal recommendation or other evaluation with respect to such financial instruments and is intended for use only by those professional investors to whom it is made available by Crédit Agricole CIB. Crédit Agricole CIB does not act in a fiduciary capacity to you in respect of this report.

Crédit Agricole CIB may at any time stop producing or updating this report. Not all strategies are appropriate at all times. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. The price, value of and income from any of the financial instruments mentioned in this report can fall as well as rise and you may make losses if you invest in them. Independent advice should be sought. In any case, investors are invited to make their own independent decision as to whether a financial instrument or whether investment in the financial instruments described herein is proper, suitable or appropriate based on their own judgement and upon the advice of any relevant advisors they have consulted. Crédit Agricole CIB has not taken any steps to ensure that any financial instruments referred to in this report are suitable for any investor. Crédit Agricole CIB will not treat recipients of this report as its customers by virtue of their receiving this report.

Crédit Agricole CIB, its directors, officers and employees may have financial interests or may effect transactions (whether long or short) in the financial instruments described herein for their own accounts or for the account of others, may have positions relating to other financial instruments of the issuer thereof, or any of its affiliates, or may perform or seek to perform securities, investment banking or other services for such issuer or its affiliates, within the regulatory framework set by Article 37 of Delegated Regulation (EU) 2017/565. Crédit Agricole CIB may have issued, and may in the future issue, other reports that are inconsistent with, and reach different conclusions from, the information presented in this report. Without prejudice to the requirements arising from Article 4 of Delegated Regulation (EU) 2016/958, Crédit Agricole CIB is under no obligation to ensure that such other reports are brought to the attention of any recipient of this report. Crédit Agricole CIB has established a "Policy for Managing Conflicts of Interest" which is available upon request. A summary of this policy is published on the Crédit Agricole CIB website conflict of interest | Crédit Agricole CIB. This policy also applies to the investment research activity.

None of the material, nor its content, nor any copy of it, may be altered in any way, transmitted to, copied or distributed to any other party without the prior express written permission of Crédit Agricole CIB. To the extent permitted by applicable securities laws and regulations, Crédit Agricole CIB accepts no liability whatsoever for any direct or consequential loss arising from the use of this document or its contents.

France: Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank is authorized and regulated by the Autorité de Contrôle Prudentiel et de Résolution ("ACPR") and supervised by the European Central Bank ("ECB"), the ACPR and the Autorité des Marchés Financiers ("AMF"). Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank is incorporated in France with limited liability. Registered office: 12, Place des Etats-Unis, CS 70052, 92 547 Montrouge Cedex (France). Companies Register: SIREN 304 187 701 with Registre du Commerce et des Sociétés de Nanterre. United Kingdom: Crédit Agricole CIB is authorised and regulated by the Autorité de Contrôle Prudentiel et de Résolution (the "ACPR") and supervised by the European Central Bank (the "ECB"), the ACPR and the Autorité des Marchés Financiers (the "AMF") in France. Crédit Agricole CIB London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. Details about the extent of our regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and the Prudential Regulation Authority are available from Crédit Agricole CIB London on request. Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank is a public limited company ("société anonyme") under French law, incorporated in France under SIREN number 304187701 at the Nanterre Trade and Companies Registry, with limited liability and its head office address at 12, Place des États-Unis, CS 70052, 92547 Montrouge Cedex, France. It is registered in England and Wales as an overseas company at Companies House under company number FC008194, with a UK establishment at Broadwalk House, 5 Appold Street, London, EC2A 2DA, United Kingdom (UK establishment number BR001975). United States of America: This research report is prepared by Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank and is distributed in the United States solely to persons who qualify as "Major U.S. Institutional Investors" as defined in Rule 15a-6 under the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 and who deal with Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank. This report does not carry all of the independence and disclosure standards of a retail debt research report or a research report prepared by a U.S. broker-dealer. Recipients of this research in the United States wishing to effect a transaction in any security mentioned herein should do so by contacting Crédit Agricole Securities (USA), Inc. (a broker-dealer registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") and the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA"). The delivery of this research report to any person in the United States shall not be deemed a recommendation of Crédit Agricole Securities (USA) Inc. to effect any transactions in the securities discussed herein or an endorsement of any opinion expressed herein. This report shall not be re-distributed in the United States without the consent of Crédit Agricole Securities (USA) Inc. Italy: Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank is authorised and regulated by the Autorité de Contrôle Prudentiel et de Résolution (the "ACPR") and supervised by the European Central Bank (the "ECB"), the ACPR and the Autorité des Marchés Financiers (the "AMF") in France. Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank Milan Branch is subject to supervision by the Bank of Italy and by the Commissione nazionale per le società e la borsa ("CONSOB"). This report is not intended, and should not be considered, as an offer, invitation, solicitation or recommendation to buy or sell any of the financial instruments described herein. This report is not intended, and should not be considered, as advice on investments in securities under the Consolidated Financial Law (Legislative Decree No. 50 of 24 February 1998) and can only be distributed to, and circulated among, professional investors (controparti qualificate), as defined by the relevant Italian securities legislation. Spain: This report may only be distributed to professional investors (as defined in Article 194 of Law 6/2023, of 17 March, of the Securities Markets and the Investment Services, and Article 112 of Royal Decree 813/2023, of 8 November, on the legal regime for investment services firms and other entities providing investment services) and cannot be distributed to other investors that do not fall within the category of professional investors. Hong Kong: Distributed by Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank, Hong Kong branch, an authorized financial institution registered with the Securities and Futures Commission for Type 1 (dealing in securities), Type 4 (advising on securities) and Type 6 (advising on corporate finance) regulated activities with Central Entity Number AAK816. This research report has not been reviewed or authorised by any regulatory authority in Hong Kong and is available only for professional investors within the meaning of the Securities and Futures Ordinance (Cap.571) and its subsidiary legislations. Japan: Distributed by Crédit Agricole Securities Asia B.V. which is registered for financial instruments business in Japan pursuant to the Financial Instruments and Exchange Act (Act No. 25 of 1948), and is not intended, and should not be considered, as an offer, invitation, solicitation or recommendation to buy or sell any of the financial instruments described herein. This report is not intended, and should not be considered, as advice on investments in securities which is subject to the Financial Instruments and Exchange Act (Act No. 25 of 1948). Singapore: Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank, Singapore branch ("CACIB SG") may distribute information/research produced by its head office Crédit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank incorporated in France, pursuant to an arrangement under Regulation 32C of the Financial Advisers Regulations. Credit Agricole Corporate and Investment Bank only distributes to accredited, expert, or institutional investors (in each case, as defined in the Securities and Futures Act 2001).

Switzerland: This report is provided only to institutional clients and/or professional clients within the meaning of the Swiss Financial Services Act and in strict compliance with applicable Swiss law. This document is not a prospectus within the meaning of Swiss Financial Services Act. The products mentioned in this document may not be suitable for all types of investors. Germany: This report may only be distributed to institutional investors. Australia: Distributed to wholesale investors only. This research, and any access to it, is intended only for "wholesale clients" within the meaning of the Australian Corporations Act.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF THIS DOCUMENT IN OTHER JURISDICTIONS MAY BE RESTRICTED BY LAW, AND PERSONS INTO WHOSE POSSESSION THIS DOCUMENT COMES SHOULD INFORM THEMSELVES ABOUT, AND OBSERVE, ANY SUCH RESTRICTIONS. BY ACCEPTING THIS REPORT, YOU AGREE TO BE BOUND BY THE FOREGOING.U4

09/12/25